

Film - RED FEVER

Why are stereotypes about indigenous peoples still so pervasive today - and why does the world love them so much? The award-winning documentary RED FEVER accompanies Cree filmmaker Neil Diamond on an exciting journey through pop culture and history.

With humour and depth, the film reveals the extent to which indigenous influences have shaped Western identity - often unnoticed and yet omnipresent. From romanticised clichés to hidden truths: RED FEVER asks questions that should have been asked long ago.

An insightful, entertaining and sometimes astonishing look at why the world adores indigenous cultures so much - and what really lies behind them.

Join us and discover what you didn't know!

Dates:

Saturday, 16.05.: 21:00 - 22:00

Kleine Feder

◀ Back