“Wild Etudes, Tender Songs”

The pianist, singer and composer Thomas Putensen will be performing a remarkable blend of classical, pop, rock and light-hearted, satirical poetry.

He draws an unusual concert atmosphere from these quite diverse stylistic elements and is happy to let the course of the evening be guided by the audience's mood and spirit, as well as his own inspirations arising from the moment.

Putensen's songs, performed on the piano and organ, blend the sound of the North with world music influences, and he adds a few truly enriching highlights to the evening with the odd evergreen by Holger Biege and Manfred Krug.

The concerts, held under the motto:

‘Wild Etudes and Tender Songs’ is an almost understated description of his artistic ambitions and thus consistently makes for a special experience.
